

2011 New America Media Fellowship Program on Health/Environmental Health for CA Ethnic Media Journalists

WHEN: October 13-14, 2011

New America Media's 2011 Health/Environmental Health Reporting Fellowship, sponsored by the California Wellness Foundation, will support ethnic media journalists based in California to research and write at least one in-depth story, documenting the human impact of a health care issue, or policy issue, or the impact of environmental toxins on human health. The story, or series, will be published or broadcasted in the fellows' respective ethnic media outlets, and selected stories will be published on NAM's web site. Project must be completed and published/aired no later than Jan. 16, 2012.

In addition, Health/ Environmental Health Fellows will participate in a mandatory two-day workshop hosted by the University of California Sacramento Center from Oct. 13-14, 2011 where they will meet state level policy makers, and leading health reporters, advocates and researchers.

Fellows will receive a $2,000 stipend once the story or series has been published or aired. Flight and hotel bookings for the two-day Sacramento workshop will be arranged and paid for by NAM, and fellows will be reimbursed for all other travel expenses (i.e. cab fares and train/bus tickets).
